PARIS-The opportunity has just presented itself to the Monitor representative to have direct news of Georges Clemenceau, the French statesman whose energy did much to save the country at the most critical moment. He is working hard in his little home at Saint Vincent-sur-Jard on a book in which he will tell the truth about his relations with Marshal Foch, which means the truth about the war and the peacemaking. The origin of this volume is interesting. M. Clemenceau had written an essay on Demosthenes, in which it was possible to discern oblique reflections on modern events. He had written his reminiscences of Claude Monet, celebrated painter, who was his inseparable friend. He had written a long philosophical work. But he had declared that he would not relate the history of his last period of office. When every-body else was emptying the contents of notebooks on the public, he had

Nevertheless, to a few friends he requently expressed his opinion, not for publication, of current affairs, and with remarkable candor criticized present-day statesmen. The Monitor correspondent has been privileged to listen to these shrewd observations. But it seemed that they would be lost, not only for the would be lost, not only for the actual generation, but also for posterity.

I now tearn, however, that while refusing to write himself on these subjects, he has permitted a favorite secretary to take notes of a series of conversations, which throw much light on the personal character and experiences of M. Clemenceau from his American days, following the Communard revolution of 1871 to recent times. WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, on Sept. 11, formally ordered an investigation of activities of American shipbuilding corporations at the unsuccessful 1927 Geneva naval limitations conference.

Controlled Servo Enclosed

unrivalled for smooth, sure, silent operation in any weather

To Buick, pioneer of four-wheel brakes, now falls the distinction of another major achievement in this same vital field: the development and introduction of Buick Controlled Servo Enclosed Brakes-the most effective fourwheel braking system ever devised for any automobile!

Buick's new brakes are of the highly efficient internalexpanding type. They are fully enclosed-fully protected against dust, dirt and water-and thus assure maximum braking effectiveness under all weather conditions.

They represent the highest development of the selfenergizing principle, which makes the car's own motion provide part of the braking effort. They reveal unmatched responsiveness to the slightest pedal pressure. And they are so perfectly controlled that "grabbing" is entirely unknown! When you apply these brakes, you obtain the most positive, as well as the smoothest and most silent action you have ever experienced in any automobile!

Drive the new Buick! Test not only its matchless new brakes but its brilliant allround performance, riding comfort and driving ease—all of which combine to establish the new Buick as the greatest value ever offered in the fine car field!

THE mode of the hour is of course consulted in the selection of new colorings by Pierce-A.row. But there is an artistry employed in the process which is rare among automobiles.

The blending of certain shades and tones...the choice of fine fabrics to match... the development of combinations which exclude the commonplace ... the harmonizing of interiors with exteriors. All are the concern of artists who are masters of decoration and guardians, as well, of the tradition that is Pierce-Arrow.

The result is a quality that sets this distinguished line apart. Also there is a definite limit to the number of Pierce-Arrows possible of creation each season-governed by certain fine processes of manufacture. To Every Investment Banker in the United States

If you were going to hunt elephants would you use a rifle or a shotgun?

To put this question in another form, are you spending your advertising money to reach the people who are going to buy 92% of every new issue that you have to sell, or to reach the people who are going to buy the other 8%?

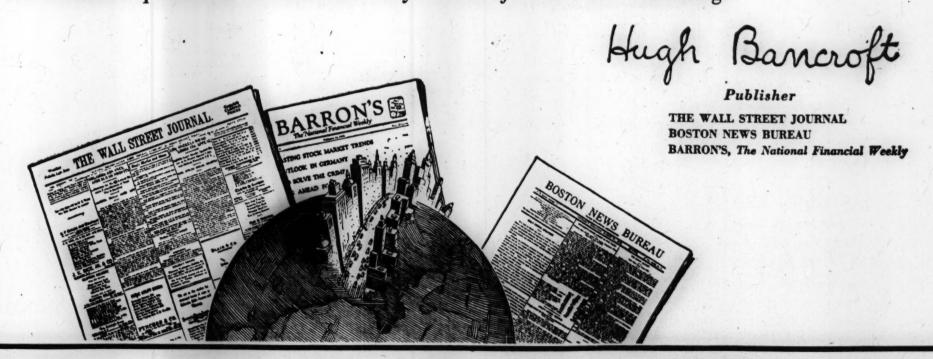

The readers of the BARRON publications: THE WALL STREET JOURNAL, BOSTON NEWS BUREAU, and BARRON'S, The National Financial Weekly, are going to buy 92% of the securities that you will sell this year.

I say 92% rather than 90% or 94%, because I accept as typical the figures of the Advertising Manager of one of New York's important financial houses. In a recent address before the New York Advertising Club, he said that an analysis of his firm's accounts showed that 92% of their volume was sold to customers who bought $5000 or more a year.

No individual is likely to buy $5000 in bonds in a single year unless he is in the $25,000 income class. There is more than a coincidence between the number of tax payers who report incomes over $25,000, namely 91,401, and the number of subscribers to the BARRON publications, 94,620.

The 94,620 subscribers to the BARRON publications include practically all the people who buy for themselves or for the institutions they represent, not only this 92% of the volume of this particular house, but 92% of the volume of every other high-grade investment house.

The BARRON publications should head every schedule for new issue advertising.

ECONOMICAL TRANSPORTATION for All The People

Twenty-one years ago, when the Model T was first made, and again in December, 1927, when the new Ford was introduced, the policy of the Ford Motor Company was announced in these words—

"We will build a motor car for the great multitude. It will be large enough for the family, but small enough for the individual to run and care for. It will be constructed of the best materials, by the best men to be hired, after the simplest designs that modern engineering can devise. But it will be so low in price that no man making a good wage will be unable to own one."

More than seventeen million Ford automobiles have been made since this announcement was first printed. The passing years have brought many changes—in appearance—in performance—in manner of manufacture. But there is one thing that has never changed—the fundamental idea behind the Ford car.

The Ford Motor Company was formed, and exists today, not merely to make automobiles but to provide economical transportation for all the people. Far more important than the car itself is the part it plays in the lives, the happiness, and the prosperity of millions of people.

mobile was considered more or less as an expensive toy, for only the wealthy to drive. There was no conception of its uses and possibilities as we know them today. It was accepted in much the same manner that the airplane was accepted five years ago. Great emphasis was placed upon its racing speed and very little upon its practical utility.

With the coming of the Ford, however, it became possible for men in all walks of life to enjoy the benefits of transportation that formerly had been limited to a fortunate few.

A great change came over the country and with it a new prosperity. By freeing the movements of men, the Ford also freed their thoughts and created new opportunities. The barriers of time and distance were broken down. Good roads followed close behind the automobile and the isolation of country districts disappeared. The nation grew as people learned to use this newly developed horse-power and fit it to their needs.

Into the hands of men of moderate means —to the workers in factories—to the toilers on the farm—was given a means to increase their income and enjoy the leisure which that increased income should bring. The working day became shorter because mea could do in eight hours the tasks that previously had taken ten or twelve—and do them better.

Always it should be remembered that we do not have automobiles because we are prosperous. We are prosperous because we have them.

Today, with all its improvements—with all its new beauty of line and color—with all the betterments and changes that have been made during the past twenty-one years—the Ford is still a "motor car for the great multitude."

It is not just a new automobile—not just so many mechanical parts carefully put together to run on wheels—but Progress—Achievement—a part of the very life and fabric of the nation.

Business of every kind moves forward at a faster pace because of it. To countless homes it brings the rewards of widening opportunity, happiness, and priceless hours of relaxation in the open air.

All of this not merely because of its safety, its comfort, its reliability, its speed, its acceleration, its ease of control, but > because of a fundamental purpose that is greater than all of these. Because, in larger degree than ever, it provides economical transportation for all the people.

The MacDowell Concerto was excellently played by Mrs. Baldwin. This interesting music bears revival unflinchingly. Possibly it is not a work of genius. On the side of its virtues it enrolls a fine sensitivity, which remains undulled for all the composer's finished eclectic scholar-

Motor transportation was unheard of then, and the owner of a fine place in the city was crowded all day the hungry hordes. Every eating be horse was much to be envied. Strings of racing animals, the best in the country, were shipped in, their owners expecting to outdistance the rest of the crowd, but as developed afterward these animals were of small buc; it was the hardened little cow pony, used to the prairies, that carried its rider to victory. There were hundreds of women making the race, most of them driving one- and two-horse vehicles, a few mounted, an unusual sight at the time. It was estimated there were from 125,000 to the word was purposed for the property of the word of the water system. He charged a quarter a glass, and the water was not iced—there was no ice plant in southern Kansas then. The day was terrifically hot, the sand and dust made it almost unbearable, and he was sold out an hour before the race started. It is recorded that he sat down and wept because he had not hauled twice as much water. The smartest men of the day were those who did not run at all, but, like the one told of above, set their stakes just across the line. They secured fine homes, as did those who were lucky enough to find a claim within a few miles of the line. Those who settled near Blackwell were equally fortunate, while a few—a very few—hung onto their claims near Ton-

Fall Forecast

S SOON as summer slips away A thoughts are turned to the coming necessaries of the autumn wardrobe. Trends must be noted, and the wise woman learns as much as possible in advance, so that her shopping will be easy and in-telligent.

Several new points will mark the styles of 1929 as distinct from those of a year ago. The first of these is the flare in coats, as well as dresses. It is a most important change, but let a note of warning be sounded for woman who is not tall, and is height. She should consider most carefully the lines of dresses and coats, for too much flare emphasizes her defects.

What Shall Your SHELF and LINING PAPER Be Like?

THERE'S a big difference in paper—there are many kinds made from a great variety of both new and used raw materials. KVP is white, clean and sanitary, made especially for home use—nothing else. Only new material is used—nature's cleanest raw material, spruce sulphite pulp, and so woven together to make it lie flat without curl or wrinkle—there are no adulterations or coatings—just pure, new material all the way through, with a smooth, firm velvet finish that wears well, free from coated enamel -when soiled can be wiped off with a cloth.

CUMMER frocks look shabby before September, and yet there is much warm weather during that month. So it is necessary to give some little touches to retrieve them. The collar, which is in vogue this year, is an excellent feature for the purpose.

The places where the summer frock seems to give out is in the sleeves and at the back near the sleeves, where the material often sleeves, where the material often frays. This year's frocks are so often sleeveless that it is quite easy and simple to cut out worn, pulled and faded sleeves. Then the collar enters

Collars may be of self material, of contrasting or of harmonizing material in a suitable color. Georgette in the center, looks smart on school pockets are suitable for coats. Well pockets may be set at an angle, as collars are very often used over a frock of a different material, either plain or figured. The edges may be picoted or bound with a bit of the material of the frock itself in a wide band or a narrower binding cut from the discarded sleeves. Only a yard or three-quarters of a yard of geor-gette is needed, according to the style or shape of the collar, which is exor snape of the collar, which is exceedingly simple to make, being in the trimming is used; or in the georgette if the collar is kept plain.

One dress which was retrieved in this way took on a new lease of life. this way took on a new lease of life. The fresh georgette collar hung down, covering not only the worn places about the armholes but the entire waist. The georgette chosen was a deep coffee color, and this was put over a dainty figured silk of harmonizing tan, with a brown and small blue design. Of course the skirt of the frock, having received very little wear and tear, was good, so, with the fresh collar covering so, with the fresh collar covering almost the entire waist, and with deep points in the front and back and two points over the arms, partly to cover them and make up for the removed sleeves, there was a dress almost as good as new.

Linings Emerge

The linings of fur coats are important this season. Most popular are tweeds and the novelty imported woolen materials. Such a fabric is repeated on the outside of the coat T Is of great importance to have in a tuxedo collar, cuffs or an incrusted band on the bottom of the coat. Printed silks are also used for linings and for exterior trimming, in which case they are often outlined against a satin background. Combinations of material are also used in bands, blocks, zigzags and modern-fitting trees in order to preserve the shape. If they are wet, place them on their sides to allow the soles to dry. Never put shoes very near a fire or radiator. Heat destroys Light metal adjustable shoe trees are the best. Those with a strong arched spring are likely to stretch the toe.

It is advisable to have the buttons on strap shoes readjusted occasionally; this adds greatly to one's comfort in walking and prevents undue wear on the stockings at the heels.

When taking long walks or standing much, wear laced oxfords. They support the foot and prevent its spreading.

To clean shoes satisfactorily, remove all dust and dirt. If very dirty they can even be sponged with warm soap and water, and dried at once with a clean cloth. parts of the country. And now that a taste for this style of clothing has been initiated, several talented and enterprising Bulgarian dressmakers have begun to specialize on village fashions and find much inspiration in reproducing the beautiful clothes that humble Bulgarian women, living under foreign domination in tiny obscure villages and completely shut off from the outside world, used to make with no other tools and materials than needles, homespun thread, hand-woven cloth and vegetable dyes.

Mrs. Choukanova-Ploneer Of these women who have turned the making of native costumes into a calling the most successful is Mrs Rossitsa Choukanova, who recently resigned from the position which she had held for many years as the teacher of sewing and embroidery in a Girls' High School and opened a shop for Bulgarian costumes in Sofia. The Source The most ordinary type of a native Bulgarian costume consists of a light, one-piece, white undergarment, fairly full and long? and a shorter, heavier, dark, sleeveless, openbreasted outer garment. Both of these are copiously decorated with many varieties of figures done pre-dominantly in red and orange colors. dominantly in red and orange colora. The white chemise is embroidered along the bottom of the skirt, on the sleeves, around the collar and on the front. The shorter outer dress is so made as to expose and accentuate these embroideries, and itself often bears many striking decorations.

The figures used are usually clever and fantastic adaptations of the forms of animals, birds and plants. There are men, dogs, cats, elephants, camels, horses, trees, roses, stars and are men, dogs, cats, elephants, camels, horses, trees, roses, stars and other objects. The figures are often very small and combined in narrow embroidered strips or squares or circles. One can imagine what fun the village girls have had working out these combinations of green brownies, distorted red dogs, smiling tigers, blue elephants, and orange cows gathered about a bunch of daisies, and all so exquisitely made and blended that they do not excite hilarity but admiration and wonder. Peasant maidens, centuries ago, who never heard the word "art" and never never heard the word "art" and never saw a book, made most marvelous caricatures of plants and animals, and worked them into the dresses in which they hoed corn, tended sheep and milked cows.

The Adaptation

Naturally, Mrs. Choukanova makes new combinations in her work and somewhat alters the old styles. Frequently instead of making the two-piece garment she works the embroideries directly onto a blue, black or red silk dress. Sometimes over the white highly embroidered undergarment she puts a very short, pleated, dark silk shirt; sometimes a jacket, and again no more than a wide colored belt.

One of her finest creations is a cos-tume which she recently made for Princess Eudoxia. It is a long, dark jacket over a white chemise. This whole enterprise started from two little native dresses which Mrs. Choukanova, then a teacher, designed as gifts for little American twin girls. They were much admired by other foreigners, requests were made for other dresses, and little by little a new business developed. A two-piece costume of good silk material and with much embroidery requires a month for making, and costs $50 or $60. And even then it is hardly equal to the real village costumes on which ambitious girls sometimes work for years.

There is none good but one, that is, and what zest and resourcefulness it calls forth! It helps in every place, under every circumstance. Prices of the active share privilege issues moved up briskly as stocks showed strength, and American Telephone 4½s gained about 2½ points on the largest turnover in the list. International Telephone 4½s advanced nearly 2.

Time money, at 8% to 9 per cent for all maturities, was unchanged, with a light demand reported. The renewal rate for call loans was 9 per cent, contrasted with Tuesday's ctosing charge of 10, and then went lower.

Seant attention was paid to the liberal yields offered by the high grade bonds of standard types, for with stocks again moving upward the public's attention was focused on the share list. The light transactions that appeared in the rail mortgages found quotations, steady to slightly firmer. Utilities were unable to resume the advances which came out in several representative obligations on Tuesday.

OLDEST INVESTMENT TRUST COMPANY MAKES NEW STOCK OFFERING

Jackson & Curtis of Boston and New York are making public offering today of 50,000 ne par beneficial interest shares of the Boston Personal Property Trust, which is the oldest general investment trust in the United States.

This trust was organized in 1893, and has survived not only the financial difficulties of that year but the Spanish-American War, the panic of 1907 and the World-War, as well as many lesser financial depressions.

In spite of these difficulties the Boston Personal Property Trust since its organization increased both its earnings and its liquidating value. The original shares of $1000 par value were split up 10 for one in 1911 and the latter shares again split 10 for one last month. Moreover, a 59 per cent stock dividend was paid in 1902.

Dividends are now paid at the rate of $1 a share on the new stock so that the holder of one of the original shares of stock would now hold 150 shares with dividends at the rate of 15 per cent on his original investment.

EATON GETS DONNER PLANT

RUFFALO, N. Y. (#)—Robert Donner, son of William H. Donner, president of the Donner Steel Corporation here and himself a member of the irre, today confirmed the report that his father's Controlling interest in the conneern's Buffalo plant had been sold to Cyrus L. Eaton, Cleveland capitalist. Mr. Donner, speaking in the absence of his father, said the story of a reported merger of independent steel companies planned by Mr. Eaton as published by a local newspaper, was "substantially correct," but that any further details would have to come from Mr. Eaton himself. The proposed company would be second in size to the United States Steel Corporation, it was reported.

Mr. H. C. Hopson. Vice-President and Treasurer of the Corporation, has summarized in part his letter to us as follows, copies of which will be furnished on request:

Business: General Gas & Electric Corporation owns or controls public utility companies rendering electric, gas and other utility services to more than 44,000 consumers in important communities in South Carolina and Florida. Lexington Water Power Company, a subsidiary, is developing a hydro-electric site on the Saluda River near Columbia, S. C., to have an initial installed capacity of 130,000 kw., expected to be in operation about September 1, 1930.

The Corporation has also made large investments in securities of Associated Gas and Electric Company and other public utility enterprises. The management regards many of these investments as temporary and plans to dispose of them as opportunities permit, with a view to investing the proceeds in securities representing interests in or control of additional operating utility enterprises.

Capitalization: The consolidated capitalization of the Corporation and its subsidiaries as of June 30, 1929, after giving effect to this and recent financing, is as follows:

10	effect to this and recent inflancing,
.0	Subsidiary Companies: Funded Debt and Preferred Stocks (Par Value)	Outstanding $42,669,660 33,824 shares
	General Gas & Electric Corporation: Preferred Stock: $6, $7 and $8 (incl. this issue)	596,000 shares
	Common Stock: Class A Class B In addition, there are outstanding 380,220 Dividend Participations in exchange proposed to offer 142,620 additional shares of Common Stock, Class A.	773,716 share 399,098 share for which it is Assets: The Corporation has no debt except current obligations incurred in the ordinary course of business. Net assets as of June 30, 1929, after deducting such current obligations and giving effect to this and recent financing, aggregate over 272% of the total liquidation value of the Preferred Stocks to be presently outstanding. The Preferred Stocks are followed by the Common Stocks, which, together with the outstanding Dividend Participations, have an indicated market value as of August 30, 1929, of over $130,000,000.

Earnings: The annual cash dividend and interest income, after expenses and taxes, on the securities owned by the Corporation at June 30, 1929, based on present cash dividend and interest rates, and including the estimated income to be derived from the permanent investment of the proceeds of recent financing and of this issue, would amount to $8,190,310, equivalent to over 2.16 times all annual dividend requirements on the Preferred Stocks to be outstanding, including this issue. If such dividends on securities owned as are paid in the form of stock are included and the stock so received is valued on the basis of the current market value thereof, the foregoing net income would be increased to the equivalent of over 2.56 times, the annual dividend requirements on Preferred Stocks to be outstanding as above.

This Preferred Stock is offered for delivery when, as and if issued and received by us and subject to approval of counsel. It is expected that delivery of temporary certificates or interim receipts will be made on or about September 25, 1929.

A letter from Mr. Arthur Lyman, Actuary of Boston Personal Property Trust, is summarized as follows:

Boston Personal Property Trust organized January 10, 1893, is the oldest general invest-ment trust in the United States in which the public could participate.

DIVIDEND RECORD Dividends have been paid in each year since organization. In each of the past 9 years the rate has been 6% or better. A 50% share dividend was paid in 1902. On the new no par shares a quarterly dividend of 25c. is payable September 30 to shares of record September 14.

ASSETS The August 30, 1929 balance sheet, before giving effect to the present offering of shares, taking securities owned as of that date at market prices then current, indicates net assets of $8,287,100, equal to $39.30 per share on the 210,860 shares then outstanding.

EARNINGS For the year 1929 (4 months estimated) income is computed to be $237.381.58, and after deducting commissions, expenses, interest and taxes (other than on gains) as $214,344.89. Income includes interest and cash dividends only. Stock dividends, proceeds of rights sold and profits realized on sale of securities are not taken into the income account.

The average net income during the past six years was equal to 88 cents per share, and if the increase in liquidating value of the fund be included as income, then average annual earnings for the past six years—were approximately $5.37 per share on the 210,860 shares outstanding before the current offering.

Dividends are paid only out of income. Annual cash income from securities held August 30, 1929 at current interest and dividend rates, plus the estimated return on cash held and on that to be received from the current sale of shares, should somewhat increase the earnings per share of the total issue.

COMPENSATION OF TRUSTEES

Th compensation of the Trustees shall not at any time exceed 5% of the gross income of the Trust Fund, and 1% of the amount distributed or conveyed upon final distribution or conveyance. For the purpose of computing compensation only interest and cash dividends are Trained by her father, little Clara Wieck found herself at the age of nine an accomplished planist who could play by heart concertos for cluded compositions of her own. In ernment erase it. Special Attention to Telephone Orders 1832, at the age of 13, she made her début as a concert pianist, and from Schussler's Sea Food Inn that time on her name appeared regularly on concert programs.

Eight years later she married a young critic and composer named Robert Schumann, who had been a frequent guest at her father's house in Leinzig Schumann had already won honors as an author and com-poser, and it became his wife's selfappointed task to present his piano-forte compositions to her large and devoted public. In this task she succeeded admirably. Not only was she largely responsible for bringing his work to the attention of the musical world, but she stood between him and this same world when its importunities became too much for his sen-

Extraordinarily gifted, she made such use of her talent as to place her in the foremost rank of artists of her day. Her playing has been described what's as "characterized by an entire ab-sence of personal display, a keen perception of the composer's meaning, and an unfailing power of set-ting it forth in perfectly intelligible She revealed new and unexpected beauties in the great composi tions she played, even to musicians thoroughly familiar with them: and her rendition of her husband's works was inimitable.

The Schumanns drew to them friends of worth and prominence, in-cluding Brahms and Mendelssohn. Mme. Schumann's private and public life alike were distinguished by her simplicity, dignity, and charm of manner. The presiding genius of her home, she preserved her art and her graciousness intact through its responsibilities and trials. Besides a very great artist, the nineteenth century found in her one of its most beautiful characters.

How the World Court Does Its Work

WHAT, let a World Court with six or seven representatives of one representatives of one empire adhering to it adjudicate disputes involving the United States? Never! And that is one of the arguments still heard in the United States against American membership in the Permanent Court of International Justice.

But an understanding of what goes on behind the scenes in the World Court would clear up this unnecessary apprehension of partiality The Court consists of fifteen judges, eleven of whom are regularly sitting. Charles E. Hughes is one of this number, although the United States is not yet a member of the Court. The British Empire has one judge in the list of the first eleven, and no country has more than one.

When an international case has been submitted to the Court, the first thing that happens. after the doors of the private meeting room have swung shut against the world, is an informal exchange of views on the matter at issue. This does not dea! with the merits of the case, but with the opinion of the judges on what constitute the salient features.

Once this discussion is finished, a time limit is fixed within which the judges must file a note containing their considered individual opinion on the case. These notes are distributed anonymously, being unsigned and bearing only numbers. Later, the president circulates a digest of the opinions, arranged into points, so that the Court may settle by successive preliminary votes not only the solution at which the majority wishes to arrive on the main points at issue, but also the main arguments to be considered.

But this is only the beginning, according to Ake Hammarskjold, register of the Court. A long and laborious discussion may follow before a vote is taken and a decision drafted. Once completed, the draft is circulated to all the members of the Court and a time limit fixed for presentation of amendments. With these amendments, the drafting committee recommences its labors. Some amendments may be adopted, others the committee secks to dissuade the Court from accepting, and the whole work may be started over again. Sooner or later the final report of the drafting committee emerges. It is then discussed by the full Court, first generally, and then paragraph by paragraph. There is still opportunity for complete rejection and revision, but the time comes at last when the report of the World Court is made known. If there is division within the Court, the number in the minority is given out, and dissenting opinions may be filed.

And so the opinion is launched. It is fraught with the fate not only of the interests at stake in the individual case but to a large measure with that of international jurisdiction generally. The World Court decides not only the merits of the case, but the extent to which world confidence shall be placed upon itself. Up to the present, it may be fairly said that this confidence has steadily grown. Each judge on taking office has solemnly declared that he will exercise his powers "honorably and faithfully, impartially and conscientiously." The Court to which the United States is asked to adhere cannot be accused of partiality. Unquestionably, it is the greatest experiment ever tried in the field of international jurisdiction.

Regulating Air Traffic

TUST as the railways passed through an era of expansion, of rate cutting, rebating, pooling and finally regulation, so does it appear that the air lines must eventually be supervised either by the Interstate Commerce Commission or some other similar agency. While the air companies have not experienced the full phase of railway evolution, they have nevertheless passed through the first era of expansion and have approached that of rate cutting.

It is true that the United States Department of Commerce maintains a close supervision over the flying industry, but this pertains primarily to matters of safety. The traffic side of the problem is, at present, without any form of control or supervision. The rates charged by air lines are based upon "what the traffic

But competition is certain to develop-it already has on many routes-and with it come the problems of equalizing rates, of "long and short haul" rates (which are a nemesis in any transportation industry), in order that one community may not receive more favorable rates than another, and other questions such as those which have been brought before the Interstate Commerce Commission for solution, either by railways or by shippers and passengers whom they serve. Such a jurisdiction of motorbus and truck rates also has frequently been discussed, but it has been felt that the time was not yet ripe for such a supervision. Similarly, it may be admitted that the situation in respect to air transport has not yet crystallized to an extent warranting supervision. But regulation is in no sense a deterrent to profitable public utility operation. It is, in fact, a protection to utilities, assuring them of stability in rates and freedom from unfair competition. As the airplane passes from the present era of a novelty and a carrier of pleasure-seeking passengers to that of a common carrier of passengers, mail and express, the need of effective regulation of charges, safety, regularity of service and other details will become as selfevident as has been that of other carriers on land and sea. The sooner this is undertaken the less disturbing will be the necessary readjustments.

Maine Lights Its Own Home First

MAINE'S decision that the Fernald Law, which prevents the export of hydroelectric power beyond the state boundaries, must remain in force a while longer, may or may not be unfair to the giant corporations which seem to have taken the economic destinies of the Pine Tree State into their hands. At any rate, however, the citizens have declared in unmistakable tones that big business's first responsibility is directly and inescapably to the people.

For the citizens of Maine refused to pass the Smith-Carlton bill, providing for the export of surplus power, not only because they suspected the activities of the superpower combination which had extended into their State, but chiefly because they were certain that the power companies had not done enough for rural electrifi-

Maine farms, except in one or two relatively rich counties, are stony and reluctant. This. rugged environment has helped build up many a sterling character, and nowadays it provides a picturesque summer playground; but the amenities of life twelve months of the year on the Maine farm are none too ample, and the need for electrification is pressing.

Naturally, the expense of extending lines and power to the scattered farms is heavy, while rates are often high; but Maine farmers and farm wives are convinced that power companies should make a greater effort on behalf of their rural constituents before they plan to ship the cream of their hydroelectric power out of the State. They have read the huge advertisements urging export which have appeared persistently in the Maine press for several years, but they have been left unimpressed-and unlighted Hence they flocked to the polls, outvoted their city cousins, and defeated the export bill. The power companies contend, with much show of figures, that the, have done their utmost for the farmers of the State, and that the export of power would so strengthen their position as to enable them to do more; but the farmers have passed the onus of responsibility right back to the companies, and insist on service before concessions.

The Smith-Carlton bill went a long way to satisfy the farmers' wishes, but it is apparent that a compact, to be drafted under the compact clause of the Federal Constitution, by direct negotiation between Maine and Massachusetts. is the most liberal concession which the majority of Maine voters, in their present frame of mind, will accept. Those students of American problems who see the control of affairs passing too rapidly into the hands of great business interests may be encouraged by the revolt of the Maine farmers. Even the corporations themselves, which in these days have indicated their desire to dedicate themselves to the ideal of public service, should not complain. Just as the Smith-Carlton bill was a great concession to the people of Maine, so perhaps the corporations will go a step further and recognize, even more to the satisfaction of Maine, that a natural resource like water power constitutes a public legacy, to be administered for the best interests of every-

Moscow, Venice, New York-

DE IT sedition or libel, we cannot restrain the remark that traffic congestion is most certainly not an American invention. And if the skyscraper and the motorcar present their own quaint problems to the street commissioners of the cities of the United States, it is quite possible, we submit, to get together a nice little traffic iam without benefit of either this American mode of sometimes rapid transit or this American device of modern cliff dwelling.

There is, for example, Moscow, the energetic capital of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, in which, if anywhere, the pedestrian and the strap hanger ought surely to command the effective sympathies of the state.

But what encouragement do we get from this citadel of Communism? The transportation problem, we are informed in an all-too-authoritative dispatch, is as acute, in its way, as it is in New York. And this, notwithstanding the fact that in all Russia there are only 25,000 automobiles to the 25,000,000 in the United States; that in Russia there is but one motorcar to every 6980 inhabitants, while in the United States there is one motorcar to every 4.9 persons (making two and a fraction backseat drivers further to congest matters); that in Moscow taxicabs are so scarce that one can rarely be located outside the few central stations, while in New York one does well, however nimble and sly he may be, to escape the taxicabs anywhere from Broadway to the Bronx.

Then there is Venice, from which automobiles are wholly excluded and in which jay walking for more reasons than one, is reduced to a minimum. Yet Venice is becoming perplexed at the maze of its traffic, and we hear talk of subways, elevated railroads and a few extra canals to expedite travel for the Venetian. Now, who is not willing to admit that neither Communism nor Fascism is wholly to blame for the traffic congestion in Moscow and Venice. and is it not time to say an equally kind word for the skyscraper and the automobile?

China's Five-Foot Bookshelf

WHILE the fortunes of various political, social and economic movements in China rise and fall, and rise again, there is one group which advances unwaveringly toward its chosen goal. This is the organization headed by Dr. James ("Jimmy") Yen, which aspires to teach the Chinese masses to read and write within a generation.

The national and provincial governments of China, impressed by the speed with which hundreds of thousands of illiterate adults have been taught their "thousand characters," are promoting Dr. Yen's work, and with his assistance are converting the movement into a system of government education. The Provinces of Kiangsu and Kwangtung have taken the lead with appropriations of about $2,000,000 gold, with which the groundwork is being laid for universal schooling. Central training schools for teachers have been established in these provinces, where Dr. Yen and his associates are instructing teachers how to impart, to adults as well as children, the art of reading and writing. These teachers are enlisted from every hsien (county) of the provinces, so that they will be teaching the people among whom they have been reared. As it has been demonstrated that adults can learn to read and write by devoting an hour a day to study for four months, and by spending. only six cents gold for books, the possibilities of the project become apparent.

The movement has spread so rapidly that Dr. Yen has decided the "missionary" period is completed, and is now turning his attention to the qualitative side of the work. He and the loyal associates who have worked with him from the beginning are now laboring in the "experimental laboratory" at Tinghsien, a single county in southern Hopei Province. Here they are setting up a "model county," which will serve as an example to the rest of China. This county has a population of about 400,000, centered in about 400 villages.

The mass education movement is being extended to every one of these villages, and Dr. Yen hopes to show that an entire county can be made literate in an amazingly short time by the methods he has worked out during the last ten years.

Mr. Toscanini Chooses

A RTURO TOSCANINI'S resignation as direc-A tor of the Scala Opera House at Milan will cause no surprise among musicians and music lovers. Rumors of his impending departure had been current for some time. It had been evident, moreover, that he must choose soon between his loyalty to the ancient lyric stage in Milan and his devotion to his American concert audiences. For at least a year now his position has been somewhat ambiguous. He has been chief conductor of an opera company in Milan and of an orchestra in New York whose seasons, roughly, run concurrently. Even a genius cannot be in two places at once. While he remained in Milan his New York admirers murmured. When he sojourned in New York his compatriots presumably repined likewise. His fame was secure in both places. At La Scala he enjoyed a dictatorship as absolute, in its field, as Signor Mussolini's. In New York he had a free hand, too. Both publics, no doubt, were near his heart. But he could hardly go on indefinitely satisfying both at the same time. When it was announced that he would conduct sixty concerts in New York next season, it was apparent that he had yielded to the American demand. Announcement of his retirement from La Scala merely spells out the solution. Just why Mr. Toscanini chose New York it is not necessary to debate. Cynics will assume that the financial inducement was too great to be refused. Others, who recognize in Mr. Toscanini a great artist, will reflect that at La Scala, the conductor might well consider, his task had been accomplished. The company there had been guided to extraordinary artistic achievements Mr. Toscanini last spring led it on a triumphal tour. Berlin, which is not indulgent in its judgment of foreign artists, paid him unprecedented tribute. Public and critics hailed his performances as touching previously unknown heights.

New York has been no less generous. His concert audiences in that city, like his audiences of old at the Metropolitan Opera, have acclaimed him unreservedly. The New York critics, who remain quite cool before the appealing endeavors of most visiting conductors. find their defenses swept away by Mr. Toscanini. The things they say of him must seem amazing to those who have not heard him conduct. But his most enthusiastic admirers could hardly maintain that nothing remains to be done toward rebuilding the Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra. Grant that it is a different orchestra when he picks up the baton; still, after he has nd more re meet may sound better under other conductors than it does now. There is a task there that must be a challenge to him. Nor will the benefit be all on one side. Every conductor grows along with his orchestra. To the faithful no doubt it will sound impious to intimate that there might be an improvement in Toscanini. But without saying that his interpretations might be bettered, it is perhaps fair to suggest that the number of compositions which he thus illuminates might be larger. New York concertgoers, as a matter of fact, did become restive last year because of the many repetitions set before them during Mr. Toscanini's brief tenancy of the Carnegie Hall podium. With La Scala off his mind, he will be able this season to devote more time to preparing programs which shall offer novelty and variety. He will offer, perhaps, more new pieces, and more revivals of the less familiar classics. He may even find a place on some of his programs for new works by Americans. His welcome is certain. With his new freedom to devote himself to his task in New York, there is every reason to expect that his concerts will hold even greater interest and value than ever.

Editorial Notes

"No other great reform in human history has moved so rapidly toward its consummation as the movement to eliminate war among the civilized nations of the world," says James T. Shotwell. When it is remembered that Mr. Shotwell is professor of history at Columbia University, and is acknowledged to be one of the best-informed experts on disarmament in America, his words express a concise statement of welcome facts.

The Lambda Chi Alpha college fraternity, with representatives from the United States and Canada, in general assembly recently, went on record as unalterably opposed to alumni meetings "where law, common sense and fraternity ideals are flouted through the alumnus with a bottle on his hip." Another refutation of the calumny against drinking college youth.

Waseda University defeated University of Michigan in their first baseball game of Michigan's tour of Japan this year and outbatted the visitors in their second, losing only through an error. Who said the Japanese were not learning the great American game?

Post Card Cities

THEY lie in a pasteboard box under the bed (apart-HEY lie in a pasteboard box under the bed (apartment ways and means)—cities apread out for telescopic miles. You adjust the telescope to imagination's eye. Unless you do that they are just painted cities on picture post cards. They sleep there like sunken cities of legend, dim, remote, forgotten, until the day you are Putting Things in Order. Then you find them. And, when they are looked at, they come to life.

You take up in your hands (you have on your cleaning gioves) the old Bonaventure Station in Montreal. You remember arriving there. How foreign and French it seemed. The ouasint habitants from the outlying country seemed. The quaint habitants from the outlying country flit in miniature across your memory. What a strange -Canada. Like figures in a puppet show the caleches, drawn by droopy horses and guided by droopier drivers, plod up the encircling road of the mountain side. Mount Royal throws its amethystine light

Another card shows Windsor Station. A long ways between. Three years, and Montreal is less foreign-quite English, in fact—and American. How much at home feel. How well you now know St. Catherine Street, West, and St. Denis, East. You are saying good-by to home when you leave Windsor Station behind, boarding the comfortable train of the world-spanning C. P. R. The pictures flick between your fingers (you have removed the gloves), the great Grain Elevators, Montreal Harbor and Victoria Bridge kindling a reminiscential afterglow of the silver St. Lawrence River. Yes, you love Montreal.

Then Toronto, with its divagating ravine. You look deep into the tree-hung valley (the two-for-a-nickel colors are fading now), and again you are lost there in the misty viridescence of May. It was an exquisite losing-place. And Lake Ontario. Again you watch the green-glinting undercurve of the crested wave, and dream of the sea. You missed the brine. Toronto, its university, its pleasant stucco homes, its unusual little homestead Art Gallery (of those years), and the sprightly holidaying of the Canadian National Exposition—unroll in panorama before you at one touch of a picture post card. Yes, you love Toronto, too.

You remember crossing Lake Ontario to Niagara Falls, also in May, and up a little river that twined daintily through tapestried banks-an episode of melting beauty Later you follow the lake shore to Hamilton, or travel by train across the rich farmlands of Ontario to Windsor. In the lambent morning hour, capacious women are carrying baskets of vegetables and fruits to market. Red apples gleam in the picture, like a still-life study, throwing everything else into background.

But here's Detroit, Just across from Windsor. The low musical call of mercantile barges moving sedately up the Detroit River surprises you, as if the chromo post card portrayal of the Detroit Water Front and Sky Line had suddenly become a talkic. And then the sound picture fades and the city slowly sinks beneath shimmering high lights and darkling shadows, until the river flows smooth and black, with both banks lit, the busy coruscations of city lights on one side, the flickering lamps of the town on

The pasteboard box is still dusty and the surrounding disorder is even less orderly than before. But you can't resist this. For here is a little souvenir packet. It unfoids, with views on both sides of the strip. And you float straight out from the dusty bedroom (perhaps on motes of dust) to Mount Vernon on a misty-moisty morning. An autumn morning it is-just at the end of the war Gray reflections of the sky scoop hollows in the yellow Potomac River, clustered with pearls of rain, and scuffed up with white frilling from the dingy little river steamer, Charles Presto! You are in Chicago and the indiminishable vista of Presto! You are in Chicago. For here is the broad sweep of Michigan Boulevard and the indiminishable vista of Michigan Lake seen with dioramic effect through the next card you pick up. The fascinating Boulevard winds its way backward to the many memories behind you. It was some years ago when you first greeted the city with your vast enthusiasm. "And, oh, yes," you exclaimed, happily, taking your first Chicago bus ride very proudly; and, as you passed the Auditorium Hotel, "there is Chicago's well-known Palmer House." But, it has been admitted, that was some years ago. some years ago. . . .

It was, in fact, the year of the San Francisco Exposition. You were on your way there. The record is before you in pastels: the decorative motifs of gray battleships on dress parade before the park water front; the glissando of fountains amid the virent shrubbery; the loyely terra cotta buildings. If it hadn't been for the building devoted to Fine Arts, you might have got inside some of the others. There was always something in that Fine Arts Building to go back to. . . .

"But the morning is waning, really, my dear your dust cap. . . "

"Just one minute more," the second of your two inner voices pleads. And you lovingly putter once more over the post card pictures.

The return trip across the continent: round black dots on the map emerging into cities before your eyes; seriate triangles becoming mountains; wriggly lines curling into rivers; the amazing straticulate rock formations of Utah and Nevada; the brave two-story false fronts on little mid-western cities. All these have flashed at you like stereopticons of remembrance. Then, the New York-to-Boston steamer, crossing a summer moon path on the Cape Cod Canal. Rows of ochre portholes and cabin windows are ooking down at their elongated caricatures in the water. And you are looking down at them, too, post-meditating the Marvelous City.

But these are cards of your own selecting. Their revelations are subjective. You have been gilding the product of the colored post card business with your own pictorial

An English postal tells quite a different story. Mounted on marbled paper, with a wide margin, is a delicate spot of English countryside. It might have been painted by Constable. It recalls Wordsworth and Hardy. It has definitely not a commercial air.

There are also provocative bits of Germany. Think of Schloss Lichtenstein on a three by six space.

But the newest is the best—a carte postale from Russia.

It is in no way ordinary, not even in size, being big, no doubt, because Russian. You look through a wide-flung casement from a country house near Moscow straight into the enchanted forest. Before the window, like a set from the Chauve-Souris, is spread Tea for One. What is Russia without the samovar? But there are also two realistic eggs, and the spoon is waiting in the tea glass beside the Russian newspaper. You linger a little wistfully over this latest glimpse through post card windows. . .

Time to pick up the toys and get to work. The marionettes of memory must relapse to their wooden stillness. Another accumulation of dust must gather over the pasteboard box and dim to dormancy the post card cities

"The Junior Back-Seat Driver"

TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR: We read aloud the editorial in the Monitor of Aug. 16 called "The Junior Back-Seat Driver," and we feel impelled to register a gentle remonstrance! Let us first explain that our opinions of human affairs are largely formed by the Monitor, and this is the first time we re-member disagreeing with its editorial policy. But in the matter of junior back-seat drivers, we feel so much more widely experienced than your editorial writer gives evi dence of being that we must warn him.

Two years ago we drove to Boston with our four juniors -more specifically, three juniors and one junioress—in the back seat; and the only particular in which our experience paralleled that of your editor was that Junior-four of him-certainly did enliven the trip. Oh, yes, "Sudden stops" is reminiscent, too-reminiscent of the conviction which grew upon us that every road was continuously bordered with advertisements of ice-cream cones.

The new country was indeed a wonderland to us, and we did our best to help Junior to see it. We tried to picture the wonder of the Atlantic Ocean—"Why, it was over this very ocean that our grandfathers came from England and Scotland"—and one Junior remarked, "I thought that Grandpa came from North Dakota!" On th Ladder route Father brought out all his best thrillers about George Washington's army, and the only response it got was, "Were you there, too, Father?" We are shamed to admit that the "new country" to Junior was just one mountain after another on which he couldn't even imagine

Now, the "warning" we spoke of is this: Your writer mentions Junior as "an important guide." This is, we feel, a dangerous concession. If it is persisted in, Father will have practically no rights at all. He may not yet realize wealth of experience, the prime importance of "rights for fathers." We take it, his Junior is very young, and there is time for the "proud father" to change his ways; but he'd better prepare to change them promptly, or

Junior'll git him don't watch

(MRS.) ALICE MCCRAY MERRIELL. Cleveland Heights, O.

I heartily concur with the above. The back-seat occu pants certainly added "interest," as your writer asserts. It was the interest, however, such as might accompany a traveling zoo or an itinerant circus. E. W. MERRIELL

"A Machine Studying Itself"

TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR It is good to see on August 23, under the caption "A Machine Studying Itself," the second editorial within a few months on the subject of vivisection. It is time to stir the human conscience on this matter, for it seems that while the public has carelessly ignored the indescribe amount of cruelty being perpetrated daily without anesthetics on thousands of live dogs particularly, but also on other animals, in the name of science, the evil is apparently bursting its own bounds.

This insatiable lust for experimental torture is now, according to apparently authoritative statements, being practiced on defenseless women and children in in-firmaries and orphanages. From the Washington Humane Education and Anti-Vivisection Society, Inc., comes an il-lustration, for instance, of a little orphan girl with face completely distorted by the deliberate inoculation of one eye with tuberculin, the name of the orphanage and vivieye with tubercuin, the name of the orphanage and vivi-secting doctors being given. The reading matter accom-panying this illustration states that the sight may be permanently impaired as a result of this "conjuctival test." In such a case will those doctors undertake to pro-vide for this child's welfare for life? We doubt it. Other equally revolting details of pure experimental suffering practiced on defenseless humanity call loudy for sublic practiced on defenseless humanity call loudly for public

It should also be remembered that the effect of all this torture before countless students year after year is likely to be a callous and cruel mentality in the future doctora striking contrast to the kindness and humanity which has heretofore distinguished many physicians-and cer-The law of love and justice operates unseen but surely.

Perhaps the incredible amount of unaccountable pain and disease which is attacking humanity today may be the the welfare of those who cannot defend themselves, and, let us hope, may be the means of awakening it. ADELA LEPAGE

Be Kind to Animals!

TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

Science Monitor for the fine articles that have been published about kindness to animals. Dr. George Starr White of Los Angeles says: "Teach kindness to animals—it is the first step toward kindness to numans." There is a righteous cause that greatly needs the moral nd financial support of all true humanitarians in the world—the cause of antivivisection. When the truth con-cerning vivisection is really known, its very horrors will bring its own destruction, not only because of its needless. pitiless crueities but because of its dangers to human life It has been my experience, in my work for this cause.

that many people do not know about vivisection, and that many who do know do not realize how much their help is needed. If there are any readers of the Monitor, who have not been informed in regard to vivisectional work and who would like to be, I will be more than pleased to send them information and literature.

I am making an earnest appeal to every one to give this question serious thought. I am sure all true humanitarians will want to help us to abolish this practice, and I am sure they will all want to help us to defend those wh cannot defend themselves. WINIFRED WILKINS. Delavan, Wis.

The Navy an Instrument of Protection TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

Every so often there appears in the columns of The Christian Science Monitor a dig at the navy or at naval officers. It seems as though you look upon the navy as an instrument of war—and all naval officers as thirsting for

I have been the wife of a naval officer for fifteen years. and most of the officers I know look upon the navy as an instrument of peace, of protection. One does not consider a nor does one consider a police force an instrument of

To me the United States Government is the highest human concept of civil government in the world today. It gives to every man more opportunity to demonstrate his freedom—physically, morally, religiously, financially and politically-than any other government so far has. We know that without protection this form of government could not continue. The forces of evil attempt in many ways to overthrow it.

The navy is one of the present ways of protecting itand just as long as we need police to protect our families homes and grounds from those who have not yet learned o respect the rights of others-just so long will we need the navy to protect our country, its government and people from the tyranny and destruction of organized and unor-ganized evil which is attempting to gain entrance to our shores and overthrow our government.

This is not written in any sense of criticism of your editorial policy for the ending of war—we all desire that and are grateful for your good work toward that end. It is

On the ship where my husband is at present stationed, The Christian Science Monitor is taken in the wardroom and read and liked, but a few lines like those about Quincy In your editorial notes the other day are apt to discourage the new readers of our paper because it shows such a lack of appreciation of what one is standing for.
